

New Internet Resources Provided Free for Families!

What is a database? It is a directory of information from magazines, newspapers, and encyclopedias, on the Internet. It lets you search for current information, or information from the past.

What's Inside?

- Articles from magazines, newspapers, and encyclopedias
- Maps, pictures, and charts
- Homework help

Your family now has access to a wonderful set of online databases and encyclopedias to use at home. Everything, including links to the training materials, is described and accessed in the “Elementary Online Resources” section on our one handy page: <http://schools.sd42.ca/erac>

For the younger students, start by checking out World Book Kids, Searchasaurus and Kids Search; the kids will enjoy clicking their way around these kid-friendly goldmines of information, pictures, and activities. They can also explore the Early Learning sites, including Bailey’s Book House and Millie’s Math House!

For the older students, check out World Book Student, the Encyclopedia of BC, and Student Research Center; they are filled with information on a huge range of fun, interesting and useful topics.
