.The Body Project: This is a great free website (www.teambodyproject.com) and YouTube channel if you are looking for low impact workouts that are sustainable and realistic workouts for “every BODY”. Their website states “we are not fitness models and we don’t exercise for 2 or 3 hours a day; we don’t have the time. Our workouts are real workouts for real people and taking part in the body project will help you develop a relationship with movement that changes the way you think and feel about exercising”.

Soundtrack: “It has been generally accepted that both listening to and creating music can have various positive effects on mood and mental health.” Music tends to guide us in times when we need to be uplifted, or simply need a companion during dark or intense times. Check out this resource about the benefits of music, and try to come up with a playlist for your long weekend!
